Reaffirmed At War Office That All British Troops Will Leave North Russia

Reports London Intends To Modify Policy Are Denied; All Forces Will Be Gone When Ice Closes Ports

(Reuter's Service)

London, September 7.—Referring to allegations which have been published to the effect that the public has been misled with regard to British policy in North Russia, and that offensive not defensive operations were being carried on, a high official at the War Office interviewed by Reuter's Agency said there never had been the slightest intention of deviating a hair's breadth from the policy of evacuation which was proceeding satisfactorily with the help of the relief forces. The sole advance was General Sadler-Jackson's advance of ten miles which was purely a local affair and strictly in accordance with the sound principles of defense. The official added that it would be found when the ports were closed by ice that all the British troops had left.

Evacuation Proceeding

Archangel, September 5.—The preparations for the withdrawal of the British troops are proceeding with all speed. The withdrawal is well covered by tanks and naval guns.

A huge fire broke out on Maimaxi Island and was only extinguished after the timber sawmills had been destroyed. The damage done amounts to at least sixty million roubles. The bulk of the loss falls on British companies.

Another Center Taken

Odessa (undated).—The capture of Tamboff with only twenty casualties by General Kamontoff, a famous Cossack leader, threatens to cut off the Bolshevist thrust at the junction of the Cossack and Volunteer armies which have reached Valinki. The Bolshevist concentration against General Denikin's forces is driving back General Wrangel along the Volga. General Kamontoff is organising a division from the Bolshevists captured at Tamdoff.

With the loss of Kief the Bolshevists must have abandoned any hope of retaking Odessa. Indeed they have their work cut out to escape from the meshes of the huge encircling movement. General Denikin's men are showing the utmost tolerance to the Jews.

General Smirnoff, of Port Arthur fame, was among the hostages rescued from the Bolshevists at Odessa. The majority of the Bolshevists' victims were shot in the courtyard of their headquarters, in the garage attached to the same building and in the labyrinth of cellars beneath.

In The Execution Chambers

The walls of these cellars were pitted with bullet marks and bespattered with bloodstains and portions of brains. Hundreds of empty vodka bottles were found in one cellar. There was one open cellar twenty feet deep overlooked by a window from which the Bolshevists fired with rifles at the closely packed mass of humanity below.

The executioners arrested included several girls in their teens. Shooting was regularly carried out at eleven o'clock every night. The number of victims is estimated at between two and three thousand.

Kamontoff Still Advancing

London, September 7.—A Moscow wireless telegram shows that the troops of General Kamontoff who pierced the Red front in the direction of Tamboff are still operating in spite of the statement that troops had been sent to liquidate this movement. TRADES UNION CONGRESS IS OPENED AT GLASGOW

Nationalisation And Fighting In Russia Two Subjects Being Discussed

(Reuter's Service)

London, Sept. 8.—Much interest is aroused by the Trades Union Congress which opens at Glasgow today. There are two chief subjects of discussion, nationalisation (of mines and other industries) and the fighting in Russia, on both of which direct action has been temporarily suspended.

There were demonstrations in Glasgow yesterday evening under the auspices of the Triple Alliance and the Independent Labor party men at which the speakers dwelt on the coming bitter fight between the workers and capitalists.

Mr. Clynes speaking at Carlisle said that this was the most momentous week in the history of organised Labor. He warned Labor that by threatening the wrong method to attain its ends, it risked alienating the public.

There is much speculation as to whether Colonel John Ward, who had just returned from Russia will attend the Congress.

Colonel John Ward interviewed in London yesterday, emphatically denied that Admiral Kolchak, whom he knew well, was a reactionary. He said that Admiral Kolchak was a great student of English laws and customs; he was a constitutionalist and thoroughly imbued with English ideas.

NOTED BRITISH ADMIRAL, LORD BERESFORD, DEAD

Remembered In China For Work He Did For Associated Chambers Of Commerce

(Reuter's Service)

London, September 7.—Admiral Lord Beresford died suddenly from apoplexy today.

Lord Beresford was born in 1846 in Ireland and was the second son of the fourth Marquess of Waterford. In 1859 he became a naval cadet, in 1868 a lieutenant, and in 1875 a commander. He was elected to Parliament as a Conservative from Waterford in 1874 and retained his seat until 1880.

It was during the bombardment of Alexandria in 1882 that he became a popular hero in England. In command of the gunboat Condor, he took his vessel close in to the forts and engaged them with such conspicuous gallantry that the admiral ordered a special signal, "Well done, Condor!" He was promoted to a captain for his services.

In 1885 he again returned to Parliament and under Lord Salisbury's ministry was appointed a lord of the admiralty. He was an active advocate of a larger navy and as a protest resigned his office on that issue in 1888.

In 1897 he became a rear-admiral and again entered Parliament, but the most of his time for the next few years he devoted in a mission to China on behalf of the Associated Chambers of Commerce. From 1903 to 1905 he commanded the Channel squadron. In 1905 he took command of the Mediterranean fleet and from 1906 to 1909 was commander-in-chief of the Channel fleet. In 1906 he became a full admiral.

Treaty With Bulgaria Is Now Ready To Be Presented

(American Wireless Service)

Washington, September 3.—President Wilson, in a letter to Senator Lodge, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, declined to submit the treaties with the Turks, Austrians, Hungarians and Bulgarians in their present draft form because they are under negotiation and, therefore, are subject to change and their submission now would detract from the Executive's constitutional function of negotiating treaties.

Amplifies German Note

Paris, September 6.—The following is a fuller version of the German reply to the Allied Note demanding the rescission of the article in the new German constitution providing for Austrian representation on the Imperial Council.

The reply states that the alleged objectionable clause in the German constitution merely provided for the possibility of union with Austria and therefore did not conflict with Article 80 of the Peace Treaty. However, in view of the Allied Note of September Germany is unable to maintain the standpoint she has hitherto taken, but amendment of the text of the German constitution is unnecessary as Germany is willing to declare that the objectionable clause shall remain without force and that no admittance for Austria to representation on the Imperial Council can occur without the assent of the League of Nations to the necessary alterations in the Austrian constitution.

The reply proceeds to characterise the Allied threat, in case of the Allied demand not being acceded to as "a deeply regrettable act of violence."

Chinese Delegate Cables About Austrian Treaty

(From Our Own Correspondent)

Peking, September 5.—Chief Delegate Lu Cheng-hsiang has telegraphed to the Central Government from Paris, stating that the Chinese delegates have addressed a note to the Peace Conference advancing reasons why the revision of the clauses of the Austrian Treaty that relate to China is unacceptable to the Chinese delegation. He adds that the United States, Great Britain and France are favorably inclined towards the Chinese protest and that he hopes for results favorable to China in consequence of the friendly attitude of these three Powers.

RICSHA SMASH-UP BRINGS TRAIN OF WOE FOR DZUNG

Investigation Of Collision Produces Much Opium And Several Assorted Alibis

When two ricshas collided on Szechuen Road Monday afternoon the C. P. C. on the corner went over to investigate. The craft in which Dzung Mei-ding had been riding appeared to have been at fault and the policeman decided to take occupant and equipage to the station.

On the way thither Dzung became very nervous and by the time the station had been reached he was bordering on a complete breakdown. So the police made a search of the ricsha, and brought to light two standard size balls of opium, valued at about $1,000 in these hard times.

Dzung disclaimed all blame in the matter. He had been sent by his master, who was situated at 12 Rue du Consulat, he said, to go to another shop at 326 Szechuen Road and buy the stuff. Detective Sergeant Yorke made a little trip with the prisoner over to the Szechuen Road establishment, where the staff made a sweeping denial of all knowledge of the transaction. Then they made another trip to the Rue du Consulat address, where the master of the place was equally positive that he had not sent Dzung to buy opium, on Szechuen Road or any other road.

These facts being explained to the Mixed Court matters were adjourned for a week and a summons was ordered to issue for the Szechuen Road shopman for selling opium, and a subpoena for Dzung's master to make sure of his appearance next Tuesday.

Work On New Wing Of Y.M.C.A. Building To Be Begun Today

Release Of G.$20,000 By American Headquarters Makes Possible Immediate Construction

Owing to the fact that $20,000 more in gold has been released in the past week by the American Y.M.C.A. headquarters in New York for use on the Chinese National building in Shanghai, being erected at the corner of Hongkong and Museum roads, the builders start today on the south wing of the structure which it was not intended to finish at this time.

The Chinese National Y.M.C.A. building was started January 1, of this year, though conditions were not regarded as the best, because overcrowding made the step imperative. It now looms an imposing reinforced concrete office structure of five floors, each divided into some fifteen offices. The walls are of brown pressed brick, brought from Tientsin. Though the walls and floors and roof are finished, with the exception of the additional wing, the interior finishing has but commenced.

Chinese architecture for an office building was considered impossible but it has now been decided that the main lobby of the building at least shall carry the suggestion of China. Drawings have been prepared and approved by the Building Board to decorate the entrance hall after the design of the Confucian temple in Peking and arrangements are being made for an expert decorator familiar with the use of colors to come from the capital. This room will have the reddest lacquered columns that it is possible to paint and the ceiling will be of the brilliant paneling identical with the temple from which it is copied. Other parts of the building will be finished in oak.

A special feature will be the automatic inter-communicating telephone system with places to plug in portable 'phones at will in any room of the building. This outfit, as well as the electric lighting and synchronising clock system, is being installed by Anderson, Meyer and Co.

Supervision of the building is in charge of Mr. A. Q. Adamson, Y.M.C.A. building specialist. He expects that the entire structure will be finished and ready for occupancy, January 1, 1920, just one year from the day the cornerstone was laid. Mr. Adamson is also giving general supervision to the new Hangchow Y.M.C.A. building which will be completed in November. It is being erected after the model of the Canton building and at a cost of Taels 60,000.

Representing the government, they declare that Korea is denied free development as one of the alleged autonomous Japanese protectorates and has no federalisation. Also that the recent promise of reforms in the Korean government is only a new form of cruel denationalisation and of discrimination against progress under which "we have sufferred unspeakable tortures."

GIANT METAL AIRSHIPS ARE PLANNED IN AMERICA

Craft Capable Of Remaining In Air Three Weeks Are To Come Into Service

(American Press Wireless)

Washington, September 1.—Giant all-metal airships capable of cruising 20,000 miles and remaining in the air for three weeks will appear within a few years, according to a statement issued recently by the United States Army Air Service. The statement was issued urging the immediate establishment of municipal landing fields suitable for large airships throughout the United States.

"The vast expanse of the United States, now that large airships are successfully flying in Europe, seems exceptionally favorable to the establishment of air mail routes, including service to Alaska, Hawaii, Porto Rico, Cuba, and Panama," the statement asserts.

"We may reasonably expect in the near future to have trans-continental airships in the United States capable of carrying nearly 200 tons of useful load. Obviously it will be such ships that will transport first class mail and some passengers. Airplanes will not be displaced by these ships—the natural employment of the planes in great number will be in the local distribution of mail in all directions from the main airship stops across the continent.

"The fire risk which heretofore has menaced all hydrogen filled airships will be eliminated in the future by using helium, which is not inflammable."

PEKING IS OPTIMISTIC OVER PEACE OUTLOOK

Opposition Of South To Wang Yi-tang As Chief Delegate Reported Withdrawn

(From Our Own Correspondent)

Peking, September 4.—Considerable progress has been made towards the consummation of internal peace within the last few days, and, as a result of telegraphic negotiations between the Northern Government and the more powerful leaders of the South, all important southern opposition to Wang Yi-tang as chief northern delegate has now been withdrawn. It is accordingly expected that Wang will be able to leave for Shanghai by the middle of this month and that the conference there will be reopened soon after his arrival.

A favorable sign for the successful conclusion of domestic peace is that the northern and southern representatives have come to an agreement whereby the sessions of the conference at Shanghai shall be open to every one except military officers in uniform. Representatives of the Chinese and foreign press will be admitted to all the sittings, and publicity will not be hampered in any way.

On the other hand there are indications that the Anfu members of the present Parliament, fearing for their "rice bowls" in the event of a national peace based on compromise, have come to an arrangement with Wang Yi-tang whereby no concessions are to be made to the South with regard to the status of the present northern Parliament unless some kind of a guarantee can be given at the conference that the Anfu Club is to have a majority at the coming elections for the new national Parliament.

This typically Anfu stroke of political diplomacy may result in a break in the negotiations; but present indications are that the North —or rather the Anfu Party—will yield to any reasonable demands from the South in case of necessity. They are not going to Shanghai headed by Wang Yi-tang to give anything away; but on the other hand they will go any reasonable lengths to realise a national peace for their own selfish interests.

In further connection with the domestic peace situation your correspondent is informed that Wang Yi-tang will not go so far as to permit the cancellation of the appointments of Hsu Shu-cheng and Chang Tso-lin to their present posts; and indeed Wang's reported stand on this matter is clear and at the same time reasonable enough, for Hsu and Chang are strong enough to throw over any peace agreement that leaves them out in the cold. The very object of the President and the moderate elements in the North, as well as the object of the Wang Yi-tang wing of the Anfu Party would be defeated by any agreement throwing over Chang Tso-lin and Little Hsu. The President and his followers, supported by Wang Yi-tang and his clique desire peace as soon as they can get it. They see that the country can no longer go on as it is, and each of them for his own reasons wishes to put an end to the present impossible situation.

Chefoo Doings

(China Press Correspondence)

Chefoo, September 2.—On Saturday night in the Hall of the Chefoo Club Annex, the local Amateur Dramatic Club presented their play entitled "The Marriage of Kitty" to an almost full house. It was not that the attendance was smaller than usual but the enlargement of the hall has made it more difficult to fill and certainly there were empty seats when the curtain was rung up.

The comedy was in three acts. The whole of the acting was fine, indeed it is no disparagement of past performances to say that this eclipsed them all. The various members of the dramatis personae in their respective roles simply excelled. The scenery and stage arrangements were undertaken by Mrs. King and they could not have been in better hands. The audience showed its real appreciation by loud and continued applause. The following were the members of the Cast.

Sir Reginald Belsize, Bart. ..
Mr. H. E. King.
John Travers, A. Solicitor....
Mr. Howell.
Norbury, A Man-Servant....
Mr. C. K. Smith.
Hampton, Travers Clerk ....
Mr. F. Smith.

There is no longer any talk of drought. Last week heavy rain fell accompanied by thunder claps and vivid flashes of lightning. Today it is pouring with rain. This is really our break-up storm and though nothing near as severe as that which marked the change two years ago, the heavy rain is a similar feature today. The Bluff and Lighthouse Island are not visible from the shore. But the rain is badly needed though it is too late in coming to save most of the autumn crops. I hear that peanuts are almost unprocurable, the whole crop having failed. The cooler weather has set in, which after the abnormally hot days is much appreciated. It is indeed a pity that so many summer visitors have to leave before September. This and the next month are two of the best months of the year.

The Rev. H. Matthews, who during his temporary residence in Chefoo has been in charge of the chaplaincy, is to leave on Friday. This means that the Port will be without a Chaplain and that the work of St. Andrew's and St. Peter's will again fall to the Lay-Reader.

AUSTRIAN CLAIMS DENIED ON PROTESTS OF CHINESE

Peking Is Informed Proposed Revision Of Treaty Will Not Be Made

(From Our Own Correspondent)

Peking, September 3.—A semi-official telegram has reached Peking from Paris in connection with the Austrian treaty. According to this message the Chinese delegates have lodged a strong protest against proposed revision of the terms of the treaty which affect China, and as a result of this protest the Big Five, after a careful examination of the Chinese claims, have redrafted the clauses affecting China as put forward by Austria. The five Chinese clauses are now essentially the same as those of the original draft of the treaty handed to Austria, such differences as exist being only in the wording and Austria has been advised that no further revision by her will be considered by the Allies. The five Chinese clauses, as handed to Austria, are:

(1) The Boxer Indemnity is to be cancelled once and for all, and Austria is to have no claim for compensation therefor.

(2) The Austrian Concession in Tientsin, including all Austrian Government property in the concession, is to be returned to China unconditionally and forever.

(3) All Austrian nationals in China shall be treated in the same manner as the nationals of non-treaty nations until China and Austria shall have concluded new treaties.

(4) All treaties that hitherto existed between China and Austria shall be regarded definitely and permanently cancelled as a result of the declaration of war.

(5) The Austrian Government shall lodge no protest with the Chinese Government because of the repatriation of Austrian subjects and the confiscation of Austrian property in China, as these acts on the part of the Chinese Government were acts of war.

In further connection with the Austrian treaty, your correspondent is informed officially that China will not sign the treaty unless the original clauses affecting China are accepted by Austria. No revision of these clauses unfavorable to China will be accepted by the Central Government. The Foreign Office has today sent a telegram to its delegation at Paris, instructing Minister Lu Tseng-hsiang to return to Peking as soon as possible, as there are urgent diplomatic questions for him to settle here; and delegates Wellington Koo and Alfred Sze are ordered to remain in Paris and protect China's interests in connection with the Austrian treaty.

Soochow University Commencement

(China Press Correspondence)

Soochow, September 8.—The weather today at the Commencement exercises of Soochow University was more typical of July than September. The audience was constantly reminded that the hot weather was not a thing of the past yet.

A small number of friends gathered to witness the awarding of the diplomas and certificates to the men who had completed their work in the College and Middle School departments of Soochow University. In addition to the nine graduates in the regular courses, there were three men who got their M. A. degrees, two majoring in biology and one in chemistry. Forty-seven men got certificates upon completing the work in the Middle School. The President, Dr. Cline, awarded the certificates and diplomas in the name of the Board of Trustees, and after addressing the graduating class upon the significance of work.

Addresses inspiring, practical and helpful were made by Mr. Wu of the Y.M.C.A. and Dr. Parker, Chairman of the Board of Trustees. Both men stressed the need of young men of the right caliber and right spirit in China today. They urged this class to take hold of things and do the part of men to right the present conditions.

Announcements of additions to the faculty were made, and also that money was in hand for the erecting of a science hall in the near future. The large increase in the campus was being leveled and would soon be ready for use. This would make the campus almost twice as large as it now is.

The following is a list of the graduates:

Suspended By Noske

(Reuter's Service)

Berlin, September 7.—Herr Noske has suspended the Deutsche Zeitung on account of an article in which it said that the Government had betrayed the troops to the British.

Mr. Sakurai, President, who took the chair, gave a report on behalf of his colleagues, outlining the condition of finance, commerce and industry in Taiwan, South China and other adjacent territory. He pointed out as an indication of prosperity in those parts the fact that the bank's exchange business was prosperous and the value of bills handled had reached Y.1,172,300,000 in round figures. This figure was an increase of Y.363,400,000 as compared with the same time last year.

The statement of accounts was referred to the meeting by Mr. Sakurai with the remark that in spite of all violent fluctuations attending the signing of the armistice and the Peace Treaty the bank's business result was excellent. The net profit of the six months was Y2,305,735.20, which sent up the surplus, with the addition of balance, to Y2,881,069.74. Out of the surplus Y350,000 was put aside for loss reserve, Y80,000 for dividend equalisation funds, Y70,000 for special reserve, and Y75,000 for bonuses. As dividends on shares Y1,328,000 was paid at the rate of 10 percent per annum. The balance, Y978,069.74, was carried forward to the next term.

At the conclusion of the ordinary meeting Mr. Sakurai introduced his recommendation that the bank's capital should be doubled to Y60,000,000 divided into 600,000 shares. Mr. Sakurai stated in introducing the measure that the bank's business had developed abnormally since its inception. Already the capital has been increased three times. The necessity of coping with the expansion of Taiwan's international business has induced the Board of Directors to propose the fourth increase of the bank's capital. Out of the increased stocks 290,000 will be issued to the bank's original shareholders while 10,000 will be sold in the open market at premium. All the recommendations were passed and the President was entrusted with the task of carrying out the decisions.

Philippine News Notes

The rainfall in Manila from January 1 to August 27 totaled up approximately 122 inches. This makes the rainfall for this year more than for any previous year since the establishment of the Manila weather bureau, in 1865, and there are still several weeks of monsoon weather.

The Philippine chamber of commerce has been invited to represent the Philippine islands in a world convention of American foreign traders to be held on May 12, 13, 14 and 15, 1920, in San Francisco under the auspices of the National Foreign Trade Council of the United States to which practically all the American chambers of commerce established in America or abroad are affiliated.

Assistant Director Grosvenor M. Jones, of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce at Washington, has written to Manila inquiring for information on which to present to Congress the need of the Islands for more bottoms in which to ship the Islands' chief raw products. Mr. Jones wants to know the tonnage, speed and number of vessels it would require to take care of all possible shipments of hemp, tobacco and sugar.

"The adoption of prohibition would be the best thing for the Philippines and the most eloquent testimony to put up to the people of the United States that the people of these islands are susceptible to progress." This was the gist of the addresses delivered by Dr. George E. Vincent, president of the Rockefeller Foundation, and Dr. D. N. Gandier, prohibition apostle, at a luncheon given in their honor by the Evangelical Union at the American Y. M. C. A., Manila on August 28.

A force of 1,000 marines is being recruited in the United States for Philippine service, according to information received in Manila. This force will be stationed at the Cavite and Olongapo naval stations, where there are already detachments of marines.

HUNTER MISSIONARY HERE GOING ON MONGOLIAN TRIP

Mr. H. R. Caldwell To Join Expedition For American Natural History Museum

Mr. H. R. Caldwell, big game hunter and missionary, returned with his family yesterday on the Fushima Maru, after twenty months in America. He leaves this week for Shensi and Mongolia where with Mr. Roy C. Andrews of the American Museum of Natural History, New York, they will hunt particularly for takin, serow and the big horned sheep. The trip will last something more than two months and will take them through the wildest and highest points in northwest China.

Mr. Andrews as curator of mammals of the American Museum has a wide reputation as a scientist and explorer and the book of his travels through south China in 1916, entitled "Camps and Trails of China," has been widely read.

The present trip is for specimens for three great central groups of the Museum's new Asiatic section. A new building devoted entirely to Asiatic exhibits, costing one million dollars, has been started and a ten years' program is being worked out now for filling that building with everything north while in the Asiatic animal world.

"You know what the takin is," said Mr. Caldwell when questioned yesterday about his trip. "It's a sort of wild cow, only it's as big as a buffalo and it is found in high cliff country. They are very rare. The national museum has the only one I saw in America. The difficulty in getting them is that usually your specimen falls some fifteen hundred feet and is smashed into chopped meat."

No, there isn't any particular danger in hunting takin. With serow it is somewhat different. At least they make trouble for the dogs. People call them mountain goats but they are not. They have something like a goat's head with the body of a deer, except they carry a long mane that extends the length of the body. They weigh about three hundred pounds. Just let a serow get cornered and he will throw dogs over the cliff as fast as they come up to tackle him. Mr. Andrews tells in his book of how the best dog in the pack was killed that way in 1916.

"This expedition will take along traps for every kind of animal besides the three we are after especially. There is not much doubt but that we will get, at least, some of the big mountain sheep of China. They have horns 60 inches long, perhaps the biggest horns in the world.

"Our plan is to go into Shensi first. I shall go there ahead of Mr. Andrews and serow is the game there. Then we travel to the northwest into Mongolia. My understanding is that we will strike for the highest mountains about the Gobi desert. It's cold there and it will be no easy trip."

When asked about the much-discussed blue tiger of Foochow, Mr. Caldwell's old home, the hunter shook his head and stated that neither he nor Mr. Andrews had had the luck to kill it.

"But I saw him twice, just as plain as I see you now," he said, "and once very close."

He was not ready for tigers at the time, he explained, and rather than attempt to use bird shot he did not shoot.

Mr. Caldwell turned to hunting and out-of-door life when after his first three years of tireless missionary work his health broke down. He began to bag wild hogs and leopards and then a tiger. One day at the village of Laung Tau in Fukien the natives appealed to him to put a stop to the depredations of a tiger that was terrorising the community. He agreed to hunt if others would conduct his church services while he was gone. He killed the tiger a few minutes after the tiger had killed and partly devoured a small boy and then he discovered that tiger hunting was a good kind of missionary work. That village became Christian.

Mr. Caldwell was wanted in America for the Centenary campaign. He was used, he explains smilingly, "to prove that some of the missionaries do some good for the people, and not all of them spend all of their time going about with gilt edged Bible."

Because he used his leave of absence promoting the Centenary campaign, his church directed that he should have four months' vacation when he returned to China to use in this Natural History Museum expedition.

President Wilson's Speaking Tour

THE significance of the speaking tour across the American continent which President Wilson has just begun is only imperfectly realised out here. It is a desperate effort to save the last of the remnants of his war program, the program that for two years thrilled the world and made him its spokesman. By his own admission in presenting the treaty of peace to the Senate a large part of his program was eliminated at the peace conference. And the remainder of it is now perilously near being thrown out by the Senate—how near only those who follow American opinion closely can know. The reservations to the treaty which have been presented to the Senate and some of which are now wellnigh certain of passage will negate a great deal, if not all, of that part of the peace settlement that distinguishes it from the conventional and orthodox peace settlements of history.

President Wilson is taking his fight straight to the people. Not only is he realising the futility of making it in the Senate, for the Senate is moved to a great degree by political considerations growing out of the impending presidential election; but he knows that it is public opinion he must conquer if he is not to be defeated in a fight, against the heaviest of odds. For that opinion is, while not perhaps against him, at least lukewarm. And by the fact of that lukewarmness are the conservative and obscurantic Senators emboldened to air and to enact their imitation European chauvinism. They would not dare to do so otherwise. It is a political truism that only the rare exception among statesmen ever dares do anything that will risk his hold on office; and statesmen in the twentieth century stage of political evolution are only artificially glorified small politicians, be they of Congress, House of Commons or Chamber of Deputies.

So it is to the public that Wilson must appeal. It is its faith he must win back, the faith he held so surely during the war; and it is one of the curious phenomena of the time that it should have given that faith so unquestioningly while giving it meant risk of death and deprivation of life's goods and dimmed it when there no longer was risk. For it is beyond question that the faith is dimmed. Wilson has measurably lost hold on the American people. He has lost it partly out of a predictable after-war reaction, a common accompaniment of after-war adjustments, and partly out of the disillusionment that has followed the armistice and the peace conference; the disillusionment that is the key to all world movements today, whether race riots, labor unrest or political upheavals.

Whether the President will win or not, whether he will sufficiently convert public opinion to bring its pressure to bear on the Senators, will depend on the attitude he assumes, on the line he takes. That is to say, he must deal with the situation as it exists, not as he would have it exist, not as it would have existed had he returned from Europe with a peace treaty such as he had sketched before he went. He no longer can debate on an issue which has passed. It is useless to appeal for the idealism on which he stirred the nation into war and through the war. That has nothing to do with the case; it is not under discussion. He must win support for the peace treaty as it stands in black and white, not as he had outlined it when we were still fighting to realise it.

It is not his defeat at the peace conference that has cooled the American ardor. There is no disgrace in defeat. And we know now the tremendous odds he faced; we know he opposed a whole system, entrenched in tradition and armed with all the weapons of combat. And we know now that there never was in political and diplomatic Europe and there is not now any sincere intention or desire to build up or support a real League of Nations or to set up any new code of international morality or cleaner diplomacy. And we know now that under those circumstances his defeat was inevitable; except perhaps at a price which would have severed America's relationship with Europe completely. Whether that price was too big or not, considering the delicate balance in which the world rests today, is a matter of speculation; if America's withdrawal from the peace conference and separation from Europe would have plunged Europe into bankruptcy and revolution, as quite likely it would have, then the price would have been too big.

What has cooled American ardor is Mr. Wilson's unwillingness or inability to admit, if not to realise, that he has been defeated and that by that defeat the whole situation changed and the whole basis of his case. It is useless therefore to talk about the "charter of men's liberties;" the League of Nations is not a charter of liberty, it is a sop, a European sop to American liberalism as European diplomats conceived that liberalism. It is useless to talk about "breaking the heart of the world" by rejecting the League of Nations. A League of Nations so constructed and so composed that diplomats are already squabbling about slices of the earth with fine indifference to and disdain of it you can reject a hundred times and the world will not care the least little bit of a whoop. The heart of the world will never be broken by anything that happens to the kind of a League of Nations this is. And if Mr. Wilson hopes to appeal to his people with any effect, it must be with full understanding of that.

But Mr. Wilson has a case. He can say to his people frankly that he did not succeed in having enacted a peace such as Americans envisaged when they went to war. He can say that such a peace was under the circumstances impossible to obtain. But he can also say that it is at least a better treaty than those that have ended past wars and that it probably is a better treaty than could have been obtained if America had not entered the war or if America had withdrawn from the peace conference after having contributed its share to winning the victory. He can say that out of the wreckage has been saved the League of Nations, which, however short of perfection and far from what men had hoped, is yet a nucleus, a step toward a civilised relationship between nations. It has within it the means of its own growth and development. And if men are vigilant, that growth and development will be assured. The League of Nations can be made to be whatever men will it to be. He can say that for that reason the peace treaty, even if in all other respects what it should not be, represents a net gain and should be accepted. That is Mr. Wilson's case, and it is a strong one. It rests with him whether he will make it convincing.

Japan And The Consortium

From The Herald Of Asia, Tokio
(A Japanese owned and edited weekly)

Japan has refused to become a party to the proposed Consortium for the financing of China except on condition that Manchuria and Mongolia are exempted from the scope of its interests. This action will come as a surprise to some, no doubt, but not to those familiar with Japan's policy in Eastern Asia. It may possibly be interpreted by some as an indication of our secret designs on China, which certain people are fond of suspecting; while others will, with more reason, ascribe Japan's attitude to her suspicion as to the ultimate motive underlying the Consortium; which is probably the true view of the matter.

For a number of years now certain political and commercial interests in the Occident have been scheming to lessen and eventually to undo Japan's interests in China. They would confine Japan to her island shores and force her into a position of isolation and human congestion. Apparently they fear Japan's increasing prominence and power. But more especially are they bent on supplanting her economically and commercially in the Far East. These opponents of Japan are backed by very powerful financial resources, and they hope to accomplish their designs against Japan by bringing the full force of their wealth to bear on the situation in China. Those that represent this coterie of financiers and politicians do not believe in any sort of Monroe Doctrine for the Far East, nor in Japan's policy in relation to Eastern Asia. As a matter of fact they do not admit Japan's claim to a priority of interest in China because of propinquity or for any other reason. They profess profound solicitude for the territorial integrity of China, and allege a desire to check Japan as the chief menace to this policy. Thus we have two forces contending for the preservation of the territorial integrity of China: the great financiers of the West on the one side, and Japan on the other. With such double protection China should ostensibly consider herself safe from all danger.

Yet to Japan the situation represents anything but absence of danger both to herself and to China. For Japan has every reason to believe that the plans and proposals of her critics are not wholly disinterested on behalf of China. What they desire mainly is to supplant Japan as a rival in the economic and commercial exploitation of China, and more particularly to lessen or remove her as a political influence in that country. Their slogan is the 'open door' for China. It matters not to them that Japan has time and again affirmed her adherence to this principle. She stands today, and has always stood, for free and equal opportunity for the commercial and industrial exploitation of China; and no one can truthfully say that Japan has ever in any wilful degree gone back on this position. But the occidental view of the 'open door' seems peculiar in the eyes of Japan. How can the proposed Consortium, which proposes to limit economic exploitation of China to four of five Powers, be anything but a monopoly, and thus violate the fundamental principle of the 'open door'? The door of China is to be opened for all nations to enter, for free and equal opportunity; and then in the inevitable scramble the bigger and wealthier nations will take the cake and the smaller will be crushed out. Can Japan be expected to expose herself to this danger?

Japan is not in a position either financially or industrially to compete with the great vested interests of Europe and America. She has long labored to keep out of her own territory the trust system of western countries, and she likewise wishes to preclude its octopus coils enslaving China. Japan is well aware that some of these immense financial interests of the West are capable of swallowing the entire Far East. Once they gain a hold on undeveloped regions without stable government these giants of finance have such regions and people at their will. Japan therefore has no desire to let the colossal forces of occidental finance, backed by their respective nations, loose upon helpless China; and certainly not in those regions of China where lie Japan's special interests. Of course Japan may not be justified in apprehending that the result of the proposed Consortium will be to give the bigger nations the whip hand in China and thus weaken the defenses of both Japan and China; but since this has been the logical outcome of such enterprises in other countries Japan cannot be accused of unjust suspicions. It is not necessary in this case to give historical instances, as personalities, even internationally are odious.

Of course it is true that financial groups have been operating in China for some time. What special good they have accomplished for China is not quite apparent. Certainly China is no nearer to stable government and economic independence than before. But the proposed Consortium is to have much greater powers and interests than the former Quintuple or Quadruple Syndicate, as it includes many banks, and involves political as well as purely economic loans to China. Japan has no objection to economic loans being placed in any part of China, even in the provinces of her own special interests; but she objects, and has a right to object, to political and national loans in such regions, especially as these have been promised to Japan by special treaty with China. America withdrew from the Quintuple Syndicate for the financing of China in 1913; but she is now the principal mover in the proposed new Consortium, as a means of investing the enormous wealth she has accumulated during the war. As China is in need of funds Japan can have no objection to the Consortium in principle, as has been frequently declared by her officials; but for reasons that must be apparent to all, she feels bound to have Manchuria and Mongolia left out of it.

Manchuria and Mongolia are the main frontiers of Japan's defenses in China. Their freedom from the control of any third party is absolutely essential to the safety of Korea. They are the first line of defense for the peace of the Far East. Now that there is no stable government in either Russia or China these provinces assume a status of greater importance to Japan than ever. Not only are they the bases of Japan's defenses but they form the only outlet Japan has for her surplus population, as well as forming sources for a large proportion of Japan's raw materials. Is Japan now to hand these provinces over to foreign political exploitation through powerful economic agencies? Moreover, Japan has an understanding with China that loans for railway promotion in these regions are to be placed with Japan, or at least offered to her in the first instance. Is Japan now to forego this agreement in favor of the proposed Consortium?

When the Ishii-Lansing Agreement recognised Japan's special interests in China it especially include regions contiguous to Japanese territory. This means Manchuria and Mongolia. Is it to Japan's interests now to agree to any proposal menacing these interests? The right to place loans and construct railways must be included among the more important of such special interests. Thus Japan's attitude in the matter is neither new nor arbitrary, nor again is it for the appropriation of any new interests but for those already agreed to both by China and the United States. The interests of Japan, as has been admitted, do not preclude the investment of private capital in private enterprises in Manchuria and Mongolia; they do preclude loans to the Chinese Government secured by rights or interests in the regions mentioned. Japan is ready to invite any amount of foreign capital for private investment in Manchuria and Mongolia, as this is to the interest of China as well as of Japan. What Japan opposes is the proposal to place her private and national interests in the power of a foreign financial group which has the power at any time to isolate her or prejudice her rights.

If the new Consortium be free to exploit the rest to China why should it object to the exclusion of the regions where Japan's special interests inhere, unless it has some special design on these regions? If positive objection be taken to Japan's attitude, all that can be said is that it appears like a trap to deprive Japan of the right to utilise or enjoy the special interests she has gained in China, as a result of her great sacrifice of lives and wealth in freeing that country from foreign intrusion and holding the regions thus relieved, in trust for China. But Japan cannot permit any third party to come between her and China; nor will she easily be compelled to abandon her rights and interests in China. If the new Consortium should be bent on this policy it would prove a curse, rather than a benefit, to China and the entire Far East.

Genius

The young man brought some verses to his father.

"Father, I have written poems."

"What! Let me see them instantly."

The father read them over carefully the tears slowly welling to his eyes as he did so. Finishing the last one, he threw down the manuscript, folded the boy to his breast, and sobbed:

"Oh, my poor, poor son!"

"Are they so bad as that, father?"

"Bad! They are excellent. They are real poetry. My boy, my boy, you will starve to death!"—Indianapolis Star.

American Trade In 1918-19

A remarkable jump in the shipments during June brought the total exports from the United States in the fiscal year ending with that month to more than 7,000 million dollars. This is a new record in the history of American trade. It exceeds by 1,290 million gold dollars the exports of the fiscal year 1918, and it is more than three times the exports for the year ending with June, 1914, the last normal year before the war. There has been also a large increase in the imports but it is not to be compared with the jump in exports. The value of the imports for the fiscal year 1919 was 3,096 million dollars as against 2,946 million in the preceding year, and of 1,893

The light are going out and the dark coming in. Perhaps it is an unconscious war reaction and indicates that the aversion to the blonde beast which Nietschke hailed as superman is deeper than has been supposed. The fair-haired and light of eye and complexion, after centuries of vogue and eulogy, have had their day. Exit the so-called Saxon type and enter the Latin. Farewell to peroxide and welcome to nitrate of silver. Perhaps it is just. Moreover, it is easier to be an artificial brunette than an artificial blond.

But, irrespective of where the preference fell, the fact that one was promptly and emphatically proclaimed is not without significance. It suggests the greater particularity which has come in with feminine economic independence. Time was when the young women were more catholic, because of an instinctive realisation that of both types of men there were scarcely enough to go around. Now there is indifference to this consideration.

The motto is bachelor blessedness if you can't get precisely what you want. It is necessary to revise the verse which says in regard to the old kind of girl:

On light or dark, or short or tall
She sets a spring to catch them all;
All's one to her—above her fan
She'd make sweet eyes at Caliban.

On the other hand the stupider but more constant sex blunders along in old ways and can't keep up with progress. It does not presume to dictate the color scheme of the delectable. They take the goods the gods provide and in their dull and non-discriminating way are happy. Hear, for example, a crowd of young men shouting with gusto the refrain of the song:

I like the girls—
The short ones, the tall ones,
The thin ones, the fat ones,
The light ones, the dark ones—
I like the girls.

A £100,000 Policeman

Sergeant Hure, whose beat is close to the Place de l'Opera, Paris, has recently inherited from an aunt an entirely unexpected fortune amounting to more than £100,000. The wealthy policeman has not yet been able to leave the force, as the Paris police were militarised for the war and he is not yet demobilised.

While he has been on duty it has often fallen to his lot to control queues of poor people waiting for hours outside the grocers' shops, and he has listened to their sad complaints of dear food and constantly rising prices. So, though he still stands at the corner of the Rue du Quatre September, looking no more like a man of large means than any other Paris policeman, M. Hure has used the first instalments of his fortune to found a popular restaurant where working men and humble employes of his district can get a good dinner and supper for about 1s. 6d.

Mr. Chesterton Reflects On Golf And Immortality

By W. P. Eaton

A great many people are writing, and a great many more are reading, these days, books about the future life. Not a few of these books purport to record spirit messages, communications from beyond the threshold, to tell us, not theories, but facts regarding the hereafter. Facts always have a practical advantage over theories, but the particular facts that get themselves recorded in this type of literature are, to not a few people, depressing rather than cheerful. Recently I came across a review by Gilbert Chesterton of a certain book now much read, a book wherein a mother records her communications with her dead son, who it would seem has not succeeded as yet in ascending far above this mundane sphere and its ways. Mr. Chesterton was exceedingly depressed. And what seemed to depress him most of all was the fact that this boy still wore his tweeds, his woollen stockings, and still played golf with all the orthodox implements. There appeared to be no improvement, even in putters.

From this Mr. Chesterton (who is probably too fat to golf) characteristically preached a sermon on superstition as the inevitable outcome of skepticism. After having rejected as unreasonable the mystic resurrection of the body mentioned in the creed, the unsatisfied world falls back on the crudities of "spiritualism," and beholds its dear departed, in knickerbockers, pursuing the same illusive pellet chased on earth, across the fields of ether. (No doubt the Milky Way makes an excellent water hazard.) But I cannot wholly agree with Mr. Chesterton that this marks a reversion in human thinking. Speaking at least as seriously as he, I am inclined to think that as the outcome of the creedal mystery was, in popular conception, a city of jasper and pearl (or was it only the walls and gates which were composed of these materials?) in which the departed sat playing evermore upon their golden harps, the outcome of "spiritualism" which finds the departed playing golf is a distinct gain. At least, I am sure that vastly more people prefer to achieve proficiency as golf players than as harp players. It may be true that certain wives will find small comfort in this modern hereafter, urging, in defense of the old, that harps are much more likely to keep a husband at home; that the new Heaven means but an infinite prolongation of widowhood. But, with so much time available, doubtless mixed foursomes will be permitted, even on Saturday afternoons. At any rate, from the masculine point of view, the new hereafter answers much better than the old to philosophic needs, and holds out far more promise of being pleasant.

I have never yet met a golfer who was not firmly convinced that his game could be improved with time, a belief he persists in to the ultimate hazard. Golf is more than a game, it is a symbol, it is the pursuit of perfection, which the philosophers tell us should be our task in Heaven. To see a gray-beard of sixty-five or seventy (as you may do on any course) out all alone, practising mashie approaches, is to witness something noble, something splendid, in man, and quite worthy of infinite perpetuation. The youngsters indulge in unthinking laughter, to be sure, but that is not because they scorn the pursuit of perfection; it is only because they realise the hopelessness of attainment in one whose muscles are daily becoming more inflexible. But when there is no more age, when the muscles nevermore shall wither nor the sight grow dim—ah! then will be a different story! Then the seniors shall tee up on Sirius and reach the Morning Star in three! Then, indeed, there will be a chance for the twenty-four-handicap man—after an aeon or two of practice—to break 80 over the course of the Celestial Country Club.

To break 80! How many have dreamed this dream on earth, and died, or will die, without attaining their desire! Not one of them wants to play a harp, nor, so far as we can infer from earthly conditions, does anybody desire to hear him try. But those three old cronies of his who meet him every Saturday now on the 12:49 train, followers all of the dimpled Gleam, passionate plodders after perfection, how they will rejoice in their reunion on a comfortable cloud by the first tee, waiting their turn to jab their first cramped drives—never to be cramped again—into the fairway of the stars! The old hereafter developed—in answer to man's needs, no doubt—a crude visualisation. Whatever its original mystic depth, the visualisation of it was harp. A new age asks a new visualisation. It is golf clubs.

We feel sure Mr. Chesterton is one of those queer bipeds who doesn't play golf. Otherwise he would understand the great stride forward which has been made. No—the new Heaven is not "superstition," it is that "realism," rather, which we have been hearing so much about these last four years. Alas, that Mr. Chesterton should belong to the old world, the old, dead world of pre-1914, and cannot understand the mysteries of the new era! It is not so with Ella Wheeler Wilcox. In the last chapters of her new autobiography she knows how to report facts from the hereafter and to interpret them as well. But, then, some people never grow old, and are never depressed. Probably Mrs. Wilcox doesn't play golf, either; but some day how all the earthly ouija boards will jump when her new poems of passion come across!

TIBET NEGOTIATIONS PROCEEDING AMICABLY

Explanation Given For Press Attack Recently Made On British Legation

(From Our Own Correspondent)

Peking, September 4.—Chinese press rumors to the contrary, the negotiations between Great Britain and China with regard to Tibet are progressing amicably and in a satisfactory manner, and there is every chance of their reaching a favorable conclusion provided that the Japanese and Anfu inspired propaganda does not kill them before they are completed.

According to a high official attached to the diplomatic commission, the negotiations with regard to Tibet were initiated at the request of the Chinese Government, which submitted to the British Legation a number of proposals representing the Chinese view of the case. These proposals, although frequently guessed at by the local press, have not yet been given out and are known only to the negotiating parties. It is certain, however, that the British Legation, with the approval of the London Foreign Office, has received these proposals in a friendly spirit and that there is every chance that China stands to gain, and not to lose, by the present negotiations based on them.

The attack upon the British Legation and, indeed, upon Great Britain's entire Tibetan policy has originated with the Shuntien Shih Pao, Peking's leading Japanese owned and edited Chinese daily, and with the Kung Yen Pao, the official organ of the militarists and the Anfu Party. From these papers the attack has spread to the press in general, with the result that the successful conclusion of negotiations that are intended to be favorable to China has been endangered.

That the Japanese should bring up the Tibetan question and accuse the British of mercenary motives in that country is obvious. It gives them a cover for their plans in Shantung and for their more recent stand for recognition of their special interests in Manchuria and Mongolia; and the Anfu organs, naturally friendly to the Japanese and just as hostile to everything that is western, have been the natural allies of the Japanese press in the campagin to decry Great Britain's motives in the Tibetan negotiations. The balance of the press in Peking and elsewhere has fallen into line through ignorance of the actual facts and a natural suspicion of negotiations that have been kept as secret as have those with reference to British and Chinese interests in Tibet.

China Political Notes From Chinese Press

The telegram opposing Mr. Wang Yi-tang as the Northern peace delegate, has arrived from the South-west. The Government will urge Mr. Wang to go to the South first and try to overcome the opposition of the South-west. Mr. Wang will start for the South on the 11th.

Mr. Wang Yi-tang has called on all the foreign ministers, informing them of his peace views, which he will publish before proceeding to Shanghai.

The President has repeatedly invited General Feng Kuo-chang to come to Peking for the purpose of reconciling the Chihli and Anhui factions. General Feng agrees to come to Peking shortly.

The Government proposes to appoint Mr. Tang Tsai-li, military delegate to Paris, to be China's representative at the Autumn manœuvers in Japan.

While the question of the Civil Governor of Kwangtung is not yet settled, that of the Tuchun has also cropped up. A feeling of apprehension as regards the situation in Canton is growing.

EMPRESS HERE SEPT. 19

The Empress of Asia left Vancouver on the afternoon of Thursday, September 4, and is due at Yokohama next Monday, according to a cable received yesterday by the Shanghai offices of the Canadian Pacific Ocean Services. The Empress is expected to arrive here on Friday, September 19.
